The south of France

Back to the roots for Juliette Swildens. She looked back to her youth in the south of France to find inspiration for this new collection.

A day in Aix-en-Provence.

From her grandfather's house, she kept the memories of the aromas, the family's reunion together for late lunches, summer mindlessness, the carmine sand quarry down below. From raspberries, old roses to apricots, it is this warm range of colors that give the tone of this summer collection.

In the city, we walk down sunny cobbled streets in a total 70's look. An a-line suede skirt, a psychedelic cotton and linen tee, or a vintage embroidered dress. A Jane Birkin feeling, our eternal muse.

A pause along the seaside, where the majestic blue sea reigns on the inspiration for the prints. Embroidered tops, rope wedge shoes, all invite you to a sea getaway.

La Provence.

Its countryside scattered with cicada. A new setting along with a new range of color from beige to emerald green. The palette echos with the surrounding nature.

We slip on a boyfriend trench, suede boots and leave for a joyride.

As the night falls, we slip on a satin oversized pant, a gold lamé dress to enjoy the sunset.
